What the memo claimed vs. what the audited annual financial statements show:

- Energy costs "spiraling out of control": Utilities fell in 2006 — $232,000 → $211,495 (–8.8%).
- Insurance "increased dramatically": Insurance rose less than 1.4%: $63,743 → $64,626.
- Real estate taxes spiraling: Taxes rose 6.7% — consistent with prior-year trend, not a spike.
- Payroll "spiraling out of control": Payroll fell in 2006 — $188,198 → $185,106.
- Special assessment of $2.25 per share was supposed to end. It never did. It was replaced by a permanent $2.65/share/year maintenance increase with no end date. Look at the numbers.

The real cause: assessment funds collected 2002–2006 for the facade/roof project were used for operating expenses instead of being reserved to retire a $350,000 shareholder loan due October 1, 2006. Ending cash at year-end 2005 was $313,914 — short of the loan due. The memo described the symptoms of this four-year management failure without disclosing the cause. The building ran a surplus in 17 of the 18 years following this increase totaling $4.2 million confirming the increase was not justified by actual operating needs.

Dear Fellow Shareholders:

The Riveredge Board of Directors has been closely monitoring Riveredge's operating costs since it adopted the 2006 Budget last November. During the last six months, we have been hit with large increases in energy costs, real estate taxes and insurance that far exceeded our budgetary projections, leaving us with a large budgetary shortfall and no alternative other than to revise the 2006 Budget.

The Board of Directors must insure the financial solvency of the Riveredge and maintain the building on a sound financial basis. The Board therefore has decided that it must increase the annual maintenance to $18.50 per share, retroactive to January 1, 2006.

This decision is not made lightly. Over the past years, we have kept maintenance increases to a minimum. Operating costs had remained steady and we were aware that the assessment for the facade repair and new roof was a burden on shareholders. Unfortunately, in the last two years, and especially the last year, operating costs have begun to spiral out of control, due mainly to steep increases in energy costs. These increases have hit us both directly in higher fuel and electricity costs and indirectly in higher costs of goods and services, as well as in real estate tax increases as Yonkers' and Westchester County's costs have risen. Insurance costs have also increased dramatically.

The Board considered the option of extending the current assessment or to charge a maintenance surcharge to cover the budget shortfall, but these options do not address the fact that operating costs are an annual cost that will not decrease. Instead, these costs just keep going up. The current assessment was put in place to pay for the facade repair and new roof. It was not meant to be used for ongoing operating expenses. The monies collected are to repay a loan that is due on October 1, 2006. The assessment is scheduled to finish with the August, 2006 payment and there is no plan to extend the assessment.

The retroactive part of the maintenance increase will appear on the May invoice. Shareholders have the option of paying the retroactive increase with the May maintenance, or over two months with a charge of $10.

We have attached a financial analysis of the Riveredge's operational costs for your review. The Board will be available in the Lobby on Thursday, April 27, 2006 at 7:00 PM for any questions on the maintenance charge.

Thank you.

The Riveredge Board of Directors
